

Invitation to an ETUI Education course

14 December 2021

Dear Colleagues,

the protection of migrant workers in Europe is a topical issues. Over the past two decades we observed in Europe a change in the political and social climate. Political populism and the rise of extreme right-wing parties give more and more momentum to an anti-immigrant discourse. Trade unions across Europe are affected by these dynamics and by the impact they have on their members. As trade unionists it's time to reassert our fundamental values: a worker is a worker, whatever is his or her citizenship.

Migrant workers are an integral part of European workforce. Despite this they remain very vulnerable. The status of being a non-national in one of the EU member States can still have dramatic consequences, including facing expulsion or becoming victim of exploitation and discrimination.

Against this background, promoting the rights of migrants as workers in the labour market is more than ever a priority for trade unionists.

ETUI is now launching the 2nd edition of the online course “Promoting the rights of migrants as workers”. This self-paced training, accessible from 21 February to 27 March 2021, includes tutors support and one live webinar with an ETUC expert.
